

WHEN we tell you who his father is, you'll know who taught 20-year-old Ron Armstrong to tackle like he's doing in the picture above. Dad is Ken Armstrong, wing-half star for Chelsea in more than 400 first-team games from 1947-57 and now an executive with the Colonial Mutual Life Assurance Society in Auckland as well as being a big shot with the New Zealand F.A.

There's little doubt that Ron, who plays full-back for Mount Wellington, could make the grade in Britain—F.I.F.A.'s chief coach Dettmar Cramer (West Germany) said after watching him on his latest coaching visit to Auckland: "Armstrong is very promising material and an ideal example for boys in New Zealand. If I was in his place I would go to England". But Ronnie likes the sunshine and beaches of New Zealand too much and, anyway, he's doing very nicely where he is. He's been voted N.Z. Footballer of the Year, also "best and fairest player"; he's played three Internationals for his country; and he hopes to get his B.Sc. at Auckland University later this year. Good luck, Ronnie . . . and nice to hear from you again, Ken. From all at Chelsea, best wishes to the Armstrong family in New Zealand.
